Dr. C. F. Simmone, San Antonio, Texas.

Dear Sir:—I have just returned from a visit to your 95,000-zero ranch where I have been for the purpose of investigating the conditions of soil climate, rainfall, etc., and its adaptability to general farming, truck-growing and fortics.

I found conditions really better than I expected, and fully up to representations in your literature. The soil seems to be of fine quality and of such variety as to make diversitied farming easy and profitable.

While on the ranch I had the pleasure of visiting Hall, Frenchman, Turkey Creek, Windmill, Muley Cow and Headquarters pastures. I did not see the Votaw pastures but was assured by disinterested parties that it was even better than that which I examined, and believing this I cannot be prefectly satisfied that you have the best proposition, for the poorman, in Southwest Texas.

On farms adjoining your ranch I saw fine crops growing without irrigation, and this I consider remarkable in view of the severe drought, which obtains at this time over the entire state.

I am sure this will prove to be a fine fruit-growing section, especially for grapes, figs and berries, and that the water supply is sufficient seems certainly to be proved by the flowing artesian wells in various parts of pasture, and that the rance supply is sufficient seems certainly to be proved by the flowing artesian wells in various parts of pasture, and this also settles the truck growing proposition.

You have my hearty endorsement on both your lands and plan of sale.

User truly yours.

"You'd better not try to bring three people back through the drifts," said the doctor, who had just come in for a bits and a cup of coffee. "You can't drive two horses to advantage in this weather, and if you insist upon going why don't you take my mare and cutter and go alone? She's been in the stable all dxy and she knows every inch of the road, so if you just give her her head she'll bring you through all right. You'd better take my storm cont and gloves, too, for you'll find the wind pretty cold after you've been in it a bit."

A Although I had but two miles or thereabouts to travel from the house to the railway station I made an early start and had the horse at the door before ten o'clock. The doctor came down to see me off and gave me a few parting words of advice.

As I opened the door it was almost oblive to the railway dawn the hall.

I bundled myself up in the doctor's great fur cont and surrounded myself with his rugs and then, bowing my theal to the fury of the gale, I did as I had been told, and let the mare take her own gait and pick her own way to the train.

The train was 40 minutes late and, after putting my horse in the stable and blanketing her comfortably in accordance with the doctor's instructions, I returned to the station and paced restlessly up and down the waiting room, now and then peering anxlously through the frost-coated windows in a childlike way, as if my eyes could penetrate the blackness of the night and see for miles down the Finally, as the time for its arrival drew near, one of the station men, with that intuition so frequently ob-served and so incomprehensible to the average individual, suddenly picked up a lantern and strode out on the platform. The heavy rumble of the oncoming locomotive and the faint squeal of its whistle struck my ears at the same instant and, looking out, I saw its single bleary eye gleaming dimly in the distance as it plowed on through the whiring sleet. I was about to go out on the platform myself when the station master called me to the telephone and the doctor at Carney-Croft said hurriedly: "I suppose the train is late but get MacArdel here as soon as you can if you want him to see her alive. It
